

Calling All Caregiving Families

Researchers at Scripps Gerontology Center at Miami University are testing a family communication and care coordination resource for caregiving families.

We are looking for families across the U.S. to participate in the project.

Each participating family member can receive $50.00

What's involved?

Your family will be provided with resources to help you hold a family meeting. At the beginning of the project and six months later, each family member will complete an online survey. Some families will also be asked to participate in a telephone interview.

Your family is eligible if:

1. You have one family member (60+) who needs help with daily living tasks.
2. The family member who needs help does not have a diagnosis of dementia.
3. The family member who needs help is living in the community (that is, not in a nursing home).
4. You have at least three family members (18+) willing to participate in the study (including the family member who needs help). Participating family members may live at a distance from the person who needs help.
